Dear Director Wei,

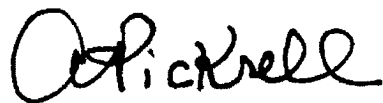

The University of Saskatchewan (U of S) is one of the leading medical doctoral universities in Canada with over 60 degrees, diplomas and certificates in over 100 areas of specialization. Located in Saskatoon, an active cultural environment with a competitive cost of living, the city and the university are appealing to students, faculty and researchers from over 100 countries who choose the U of S.

On behalf of the U of S, this letter is to confirm that the students from FIS Institute, who are currently undertaking A-Levels and submit an application for admission with preliminary results, can receive a conditional offer of admission into one of our five direct entry colleges: Arts and Science, Agriculture and Bioresources, Business, Engineering or Kinesiology. This is subject to satisfying the admission requirements of the college, such as admission average and subject pre-requisites. Students will be required to provide official final results once available.

If a student is unable to obtain their final results in time to commence the semester, we will accept FIS Institute's predicted results but these must be a minimum of 2 points higher than that listed in our prospectus. If all admission requirements and conditions are met, we can provide an unconditional letter of offer. Predicted results must be submitted on official FIS Institute school letterhead. Students must also meet the U of S English language proficiency requirements prior to receiving an unconditional offer.

We welcome FIS Institute students to the University of Saskatchewan and extend our best wishes for success in their studies.

Sincerely,

Alison Pickrell
